as a resident of Wisconsin, and a student about to enter education as a career, i want to state that i am against the proposed settlement that Microsoft donate computers, the initial cost of these second hand machines is next to nothing when compared to the cost of maintaining them, Microsoft is trying to put it's foot into one of the only markets that it does not own. if anything, make them give vouchers equal to the cost of said computers and let these schools decide what they want to do with the money, rather than pay it right back in the form of upgrades and the ridiculous loop of having to buy to stay ahead that Microsoft has created.
